

EXT. POLICE STATION - DAY

CASH MCDOLLARS, the local billionaire, and owner of the stolen jewels is prepared to deliver a speech on his missing millions. A variety of news outlets await in excitement to hear what he has to say. We see the action through the camera aimed toward the local reporter and celebrity JUDY TOWE.

JUDY TOWE

We're here at the local police station, waiting on local billionaire Cash McDollars to deliver his personal remark his stolen collection of unique, handcrafted diamonds. I'm Judy Towe, and you're watching late night news, the only news with nothing better to do.

CAMERA MAN

(offscreen)

Is that really our tag?

JUDY TOWE

Hey, I just read the cards, okay?

The two break off in an argument until it's disrupted by the reputed local billionaire. He steps to the podium with a confused grace. The crowd goes wild but stops when he humbly waves his hand.

CASH MCDOLLARS

I'm no politician. I'm not accustomed to giving speeches. But I will say, this city has the finest police department that has ever been.

The crowd goes wild as if they've just spotted Ted Nugent and it's 1984.

CASH MCDOLLARS (CONT'D)

Thanks to the hard working police of this city, I am very happy to say that my beautiful and historic collection has been removed from the hands of the man or men who wrongfully robbed me of it.

The crowd celebrates again.

CELEBRATING MAN
(offscreen)
We love you Cash!

CASH MCDOLLARS
Cash loves you too!

The crowd continues cheering.

CASH MCDOLLARS (CONT'D)
And, in honor of the hard work presented by these delightful public servants, not to mention I clearly cannot handle them on my own, I'm hereby donating said collection to our fair city,
to be used however the people see fit!

The crowd goes nuts at this majestic donation.

JUDY TOWE
(on camera)
Well there you have it, folks, the local entrepreneur, Cash McDollars, is donating his vast diamond collection to our very own city! What a marvelous man!

END SCENE